Biography

Ben likes to help his business clients achieve success. Whether his clients are building a company, creating a cutting-edge product, obtaining financing, taking strategic movement, or exploring a new industry, Ben is there to help with legal input ranging from the highest strategic discussions to the textual details of documents.

Drawing on his background advising on local, national, and international matters, and with a practical, pragmatic perspective to legal representation, Ben is experienced with helping clients balance costs and risks. Ben received his Juris Doctor degree from Harvard Law School and began his legal career at the London office of a New York law firm, where he helped with international transactions and financings. For three years before law school, he was an investment and valuation analyst. Ben's recent practice has focused on business clients ranging from high-growth technology companies to international corporations, and primarily helps with business, technology, real estate, and financial matters.

Assisting clients in an array of transactions, Ben is experienced in entity formation, funding, partnership questions, management and growth issues, legal operations, asset structuring, mergers and acquisitions, entity dissolutions, secured and unsecured lending transactions, planning and zoning, and business structures.
