Biography

A member of Parsons Behle & Latimer's corporate practice team, Craig G. Taylor has deep experience representing the people of Idaho. Craig focuses his practice in business law transactions, including mergers and acquisitions, business organization and business financing. He is experienced in agricultural co-op mergers and acquisitions and agricultural business financing.

Craig is experienced in family business succession planning and works closely with business owners, families and organizations to protect and pass down assets in a tax advantaged way, ensuring legacies remain with future generations.

Craig also maintains a strong real estate practice in which he represents landowners, developers, business owners and landlords with real estate transactions, financing, leasing, complex contracts and more.

Craig enjoys all kinds of outdoor activities with his family when not practicing law.
